This was Dad and I on our first day in San Francisco! An amazing vacation that I will have in my heart every single day. I love you Dad, thank you for asking me to join you and Mom on this 16 day adventure.

Today was the 3rd month anniversary of your passing. It was also the day of Charlotte Kindred's memorial service. Wayne and I can't be that far behind, so you and Charlotte please save our places. To say that I miss you, doesn't even come close to how I feel.

2018 has just arrived. A year without you in it. So hard to even imagine. We have a beautiful new greatgranddaughter, Teagan, that I just met today, born on Christmas Eve.. You would have been so over the moon in love with her.

It was a year ago today that we were sitting in Sandy's backyard with your sisters and niece, it was a beautiful day. We did not know at the time it would be the last day you would still feel pretty well. We even walked down to the pond, it was a good day.

I told you when we knew that you would be leaving me and all of us, that I just couldn't wrap my head around it. Its a year ago today that you left us, and I still can't fully wrap my head around it. I think I never will. You are and always will be the love of my life, and I feel every day how profoundly my life is changed. To say that I miss you will never capture the loss, the void your absence instills in me, yet you are in a very real way still by my side always. I take some comfort that some day I will be joining you, whether its in oblivion or somewhere else. I will love you forever.

September 7 - A hard day to confront. This is the first year to have to face it head on. Did a day trip to Sandestin today with my friend Karen. It was full of wonderful memories as I took her to many of the places we visited so often and enjoyed so much. I felt your presence many times, vivid memories that were both joyous and painful. My love, I hope you truly knew how much I loved you and always will.
