“ Genevieve was my great grandmother and she was such a spunky, loving woman until the end. She made the best biscuits you'd ever try and her door was always open for anybody who wanted to come eat and come chat with her. She had a fiery personality and one of the funniest people I've ever met in my entire life, we'd sit by the TV and laugh and laugh and whenever you were hungry she'd home cook you whatever you wanted. She was the wife to my great grandfather Herman Bearden who served in Korea and their everlasting love will always stick with me, they'd take turns watching the game show channel and baseball and switch channels between commercial breaks. My Grandad always had a camera in his hands and even though Mema hated having her picture made she always had been his muse. When Grandad passed and Mema was in her decline she said she wasn't afraid of death because at least she'd be with her husband again. Mema and I always would sit together and chit chat like teenage girls whenever I saw her; we would giggle and gossip and she would always be my hardest goodbye, because she wasn't just my great grandmother, she was my best friend. I miss you Mema and I talk about you regularly with the people close to me to keep your spirit alive and everybody I love knows how much you meant to me.
