“ My sister Holly was an amazing human. She always wanted to make people happy and had the most amazing laugh. She usually started conversation with how are you doing, not focusing on herself. She loved to surround herself with people that shared her positivity. Holly found that in her first love and then luckily again with Terry. She LOVED to laugh and make others laugh as well. Just like Robin Williams did. Holly and Robin both shared mesmerizing blue eyes that twinkled. Both could light up a room. Both suffered in ways they never wanted anyone to see and did a damn good job of it most of the time. Good Will Hunting, which starred Robin Williams, was one of her all time favorite movies. We watched it many times together. I always admired her courage and determination to go after something - like move across the country (just like Matt Damon's character). In the end I believe she used that same courage and determination to go after something. That something will selfishly cause us pain and longing until we are together again. Rest in peace Holly. Love, MareBear

“ *Holly Stone was a very great person, great spirt she never meet a stranger, who she left in a better place by just listening to them. She loved the beach her toes in the sand. she was my better half in life and now Im trying to understand God has had this plan and now your in his hands. your life here was great people loved you from all over the states you will be missed and never forgotten always in my heart and your Families Hearts. Holly was a great cook and home maker. So i leave you on that note. I love you always.
Holly Anne Stone your at piece now.
Thank you for being my wife and a part of my life.
