Sandra Hill-Gunsaullus

Saying goodbye to my wife is the hardest thing I have ever had to do. My heart is broken and there will always be an emptiness until we meet again. You were my best friend and accomplice as we spent our life together. We traveled to many states, and I always had you by my side. It will be very lonely without you. You were always very supportive of me, and I hope I showed you the love that you showed me. I know I was far from perfect, but I did my best.

You were surrounded by friends and family when we let you go. The love in that room was overwhelming. We all appreciated you being feisty until the end. I know this is not really goodbye because we will meet again. I will miss you dearly until then.
