“ Still thinking about you Terry. I miss your technical expertise, but more importantly I miss you. You were, (and always will be), my friend. You’re still in my prayers.

“ I am honored to have worked with Terry for a very short time before her retirement from Ochsner. She was admired and respected nationally for her knowledge of Transfusion Medicine and her commitment to quality. I can remember attending a national meeting where one of the keynote speakers noticed my name tag listed Ochsner as my employer. The speaker immediately asked about Terry and spoke so highly of her. Terry was well-known and respected in many organizations, notably AABB and ASQ. She leaves quite a legacy and will be greatly missed.

“ Terry was an icon in our Ochsner laboratory family. She was so very much respected and admired for her technical knowledge but also for the non-technical things she taught us... Like how to act with grace under pressure, when to just chuckle and let it go, when to call out something you knew was not right, and when to share a kind word or smile with someone who needed it. We will miss her deeply and are so blessed to have had her as part of our lab family.
