Her niece, Misty Keen and her husband Jason Keen and their family. Victoria is also survive by close to 20 nieces and nephews and godchildren as well as a few lifelong friends.

Speaking not only as her children, but for the countless other lives she has touched over the years, we know we speak for everyone when we say we are grateful for the time that we had to spend with her. Grateful for her always sharing whatever she had with anyone who needed it whether it be her cooking her home or just her wisdom and love, she was always there. She never faulted in making her children the center of her universe.

Having never driven a car due to a childhood accident, she gracefully navigated the complexities of life with a confident determination to serve her family always.

Over the course of her passing several people have mentioned memories of our mom's house growing up or her cooking or something she taught them to cook and we love that because that's how we remember her too. She was a mother to everyone, she couldn't help it. being a mother is what she was born to do and she was great at it.

We want to thank everyone, all of our family and friends for reaching out and helping us get through this tough time. even though our mother was with family and the people I loved her more than anything we understand she wasn't home and we know that that's where she would want to be back home with her husband and that's why instead of funeral services here in FOLEY, we will be holding a small celebration of life ceremony at a military cemetery in Rayville Louisiana where she will be laid to rest with her husband. Dennis Wayne Watt

We will reach out with the dates and any other info as soon as we know details as all of the ceremony and other arrangements are as the cemetery tells us when and where they are. Thanks again to everyone who reads this,
